Regular Meeting of The Town Council

The regular meeting of the Redcliff town council was held last Monday evening. Mayor Bott occupied the chair and the following members were present: Councillors Worts, Learmonth, Keats, Oakland and Stone.

After the reading and adoption of the minutes, Mr. Freedman, Sr., appeared before the council and asked the sanction of the council in having the pool license taken out by his son in the name of the Redcliff Amusement Co., transferred to his name. After Mr. Freedman had given his personal guarantee that the business would be conducted in accordance with the law governing pool rooms, the application was sanctioned by the council.

The chairman of the water committee reported the changes which had taken place at the pump station and a motion was passed approving the action of the town superintendent in making the change.

A letter was read from the chairman of the Finance Commission approving of the mill rate levied by the council.

Council then adjourned.

Interest in Temperance Campaign Growing

(From Prohibition Headquarters.)

Miss Nellie McClung has just concluded a successful tour of Southern Alberta in the interests of prohibition. She addressed large audiences in Calgary, Medicine Hat, Taber, Coleman, Cowley, Macleod and Lethbridge. Everywhere she reports the interest in the campaign growing and the prospects are bright for victory all along the line.

The confusion that some people find with respect to the coming referendum in the light of Premier Stewart's "bone dry" statement might easily be cleared up for such persons if they would only read the federal act upon which we vote on October 25th.

The last clause of section 154 of this act reads as follows:

"Provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall apply or extend to the importation, manufacture, sending, taking, delivery, carriage or importation into or within, or the sale or agreeing to sell for delivery in any province in which the prohibition is in force, of any intoxicating liquor for sacramental or medicinal purposes or for manufacturing or commercial purposes other than for the manufacture or use thereof as a beverage, or to any intoxicating liquor or which under the laws of the province or territory in which the prohibition is in force, may be lawfully sold therein."

Hail Premium Rate Set for Alberta

A premium of six per cent will be levied by the hail insurance commission of Alberta this year in municipalities insured under the municipal hail insurance scheme. This is the same figure as last year. Where the crop is insured for $6.00 per acre, the premium will thus be 36 cents; 48 cents where the crop is insured for $8.00 per acre; 60 cents where the insurance is for the maximum amount of $10.00 per acre. The rate was struck at a meeting of the provincial hail insurance board this e.k. Half an hour afterwards the staff was engaged in calculating the taxes for the whole of the two and a half million acres of Alberta crop insured by the commission.

Good Seed to Increase Crops

What good seed means to Canada was very clearly shown by a few figures submitted by Mr. L. H. Newman, secretary if the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, at the conference on Soil Fertility and Soil Fibre, held at Winnipeg by the Commission on Conservation.

Each spring Canada requires approximately 65,000,000 bushels of seed grain and 9,000,000 bushels of seed potatoes, or about 8 per cent of her annual average production.

About 41,000,000 acres are annually planted to these crops in Canada. An increase of but one bushel per acre of this area would add approximately $80,000,000 to the wealth of the country. One of the chief methods of increasing production is by the more general use of seed of better breeding and of varieties better suited to the districts where sown.

Dance at Box Springs On Friday, Oct. 8th

Encouraged by the great success of their last social evening the members of the Box Springs U. F. W. A. will hold another dance in the U. F. A. hall on Friday evening, Oct. 8th. Good music is assured for the occasion and during the evening refreshments will be served. Ladies are requested to bring lunch. Tickets are gentlemen will be $1.00.

The committee in charge of the last social event wish us to thank all who contributed in any way to its great success. Those who attended the pie social a few weeks ago will no doubt be glad to learn that another good time is in store for them.

Proceeds from these events go towards paying for the piano which was recently purchased. The ladies hope to get enough from the dance on the 8th to make the last payment.

Womans' Institute To Meet Oct. 6th

The Women's Institute September meeting was held on Tuesday. The members met at the home of Mrs. Balantyne for a fruit canning bee.

The October meeting will be held an Wednesday October 6th, at Mrs. Walton's, Sixth street. Cake baking will be demonstrated by Mrs. Munro. Will country members please take notice.

Navy League Campaign To Close on Oct. 21st

NAVY LEAGUE CAMPAIGN

October 21st will be Trafalgar Day, and that famous and memorable anniversary will mark the climax of a campaign throughout Canada to be carried on under the auspices of the Navy League. The direct object of the campaign will be to secure the needed funds to finance and carry on a permanent educational policy in Canada, for the avowed purpose of fostering the sea instinct in Canada, educating our youth to the traditions of the British navy, and of impressing upon the public of Canada the important part our commerce on the seas plays in the national life of the country and the Empire.

Large Air Machines To Cross Continent

An aerial transportation company has been formed by a combination of English, Canadian and United States businessmen, the new company being capitalized at $10 000,000. Operations will be begun with 20 machines of the type of the Handley-Page bombing machine, with a carrying capacity of from 16 to 26 passengers, including baggage. Toronto is on the route of the chain of large cities on the American continent that will be included in the aerial stations where the machines will call. It is expected that the trip from coast to coast over the Canadian prairies will be negotiated in about 60 hours flying time.

Soldier Farmers May Pay Loans in Full

Out of approximately 5,700 returned men who have been assisted by loans from the Soldier Settlement Board in Alberta, more than 98 per cent are making good on the land, and of the two per cent remaining very few are failures through any fault of their own, but rather on account of family troubles or force of circumstances. This is the good word reported by the field supervisors of the board, who are now in conference.

In the matter of loans for chattels, an important concession has been made by the board, that these loans may be paid off at once and in full if the settler so wishes.

Protests Against Marriage Annulment

The Right Rev. John Farthing, Anglican bishop of Montreal, issued with the unanimous endorsation of the executive a pronouncement on the mixed marriage question in Quebec with special reference to the annulment of such marriages by the Roman Catholic church authorities. The pronouncement states that such annulments are a violation of the rights of the Anglican church; they they constitute a menace to the moral life of the nation, and that these annulments are illegal.

CORNER STONE OF GORDON MEMORIAL CHURCH DULY LAID

Ceremony Performed by the Masonic Order with Grand Master Kemmis Officiating-- Supper Served After by Ladies' Aid -- Concert at Night to Finish Day's Program.

"Well Made, Truly Laid, Well Proved, True and Trusty." With these words Most Worshipful J. H. W. S. Kimmis, grand master of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons for the province of Alberta, completed the laying of the corner stone of the new Gordon Memorial church here yesterday afternoon. After the stone was put in place the Grand Master sprinkled it with corn, wine and oil, emblematical of plenty, joy and concord.

The weather was ideal for the occasion and the large crowd which turned out to witness the ceremony were greatly impressed with the solemnity and appropriateness of the proceedings.

The ceremony was in charge of the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M. of Alberta, and was presided over by Most Worshipful Brother Kemmis, the grand master. Numerous other grand lodge officers were also present and the places of those were unable to attend were filled by officials of local lodges.

Promptly at the appointed hour the procession was formed at the lodge room, and, headed by the Redcliff Citizens' band, marched to the church. On arriving on the platform prepared for the occasion the Grand Master was presented with addresses of welcome from Rev. Dr. Shearer, representing the church, Mayor Bott, representing the town, and Ed. L. Stone, representing the local lodge.

After extending greetings, Dr. Shearer requested the Grand Master to lay the corner stone according to the time-honored ceremonies of the craft. Mr. Wm. Henderson, a venerable elder of the church, followed, giving an historical sketch of the church and its work and officers, after which Capt. C. D. Scott, president of the local branch of the G. W. V. A., read the list of soldiers from Redcliff and district who made the supreme sacrifice in the war. These were deposited in the cavity of the corner stone together with a scroll from the Grand Lodge, the coins of the Dominion and a copy of the Redcliff Review.

On behalf of Quarry lodge, E. L. Stone, worshipful master, presented the Grand Master with a silver trowel, suitably engraved, as a souvnir of the occasion. The Grand Master then took charge of the proceedings and conducted the ceremony of laying the stone in accordance with the ancient Masonic form. This finished, he addressed the assemblage in words very appropriate for the occasion. After referring to some of the principles for which the society he represented, stand, he admonished all present to keep a place in their lives for the higher things in life, and for the sake of the rising generation especially to interest themselves in all matters which had for their object the betterment of conditions in their community, socially, morally, intellectually and spiritually. He complimented the church officers and members, and the citizens generally, for the promising conditions under which the new church was starting out. The fact that such a building was now so well under way, with prospects for its early completion, was sufficient evidence to him of the falsity of the often heard remark that the church generally was standing still. This could not be said at least so far as Redcliff is concerned. In closing he expressed the hope that when the building was completed it would be one of the centres of the town from which would emanate a power and influence for good which would be felt throughout the whole community.

Besides the Grand Master, the following Grand Lodge officers were present for the occasion: Geo. Murray, J. G. W.; Rev. A. H. Denson, G. C.; E. L. Stone, G. G. D.; H. B. Fuller, G. S.; Dr. A. V. MacCaulay, G. D. C. The following were appointed to take the place of other officers who were unable to be present: M. M. Downey, Grand Sec.; W. H. Hatcher, S. G. W.; J. Rutherford, G. S.; B. J. Bott, G. S. D.; F. O. McLean, G. T. Messrs. A. Finch, H. Browne and H. McBain, of Medicine Hat, and Messrs. R. S. Hodge, F. H. Courtnell, W. H. Riddell, H. W. Harper and A. J. Learmonth, of the local lodge, also took part in the the ceremony.

The local band which led the procession and the singing, added greatly to the success of the event.

After the ceremony the members of the fraternity were entertained by the ladies of the church, who had a delicious supper prepared for them in the G. W. V. A. club rooms. This supper was also open to the general public and for two hours the ladies were kept busy attending to the wants of the large crowd which patronized them.

After the supper the members of the Masonic fraternity returned to their lodge room where a pleasant hour's four-h degree was spent. Here the Grand Master addressed the brethern along lines which proved most interesting and helpful to all present. Short addresses were also given by a number of the Grand lodge officers and other visiting brethern and musical rubmers added to the enjoyment of the evening.

As a fitting close to the afternoon's program, the ladies Aid of the church got up a musical entertainment which took place in the Amuse-U theatre, and a delightful concert was the order of proceedings, this too as well patronized and most successfully carried out. The opening part of the program was taken up with short addresses by Rev. Dr. Shearer, Rev. Orman, of St. Ambrose church, gave an interesting review of the origin and history of corner stone laying. He extended greetings from the church of which he is pastor and expressed the hope that the new church would continue to grow and prosper.

Rev. Denson, who is a returned soldier, emphasized the fact that the days of chivalry are not yet over and as proof of this he referred to the many deeds of daring and heroism performed by the soldiers during the Great War when they exposed themselves to dangers of all kinds in order to relieve and assist their comrades in distress. These deeds were done without a murmur of complaint. He said that even now in times of peace there was great need for the practice of that same spirit and he hoped the whole church would profit by the examples shown on the battle field, and, remembering the sacrifices made, all would resolve to do his and her part to show that those sacrifices were not made in vain.

After extending greetings and expressing hopes for the future welfare and prosperity of the new church, Rev. J. W. Morrow spoke of the approaching referendum on the liquor question and urged all to use their vote and influence in helping to bring about better conditions in this connection.

On behalf of the citizens of the town Mayor Bott extended congratulations to the congregation for the promising prospects under which they had commenced their new church. He stated the name "Community Church" as applied to it by the pastor during the ceremony of the afternoon, and hoped that the spirit suggested by the name would be identified with it in all its activities in the future.

A musical program the followed. In this regard who was also introduced to a Redcliff audience and a most enjoyable program was given. Fossum and Mrs. Simpson. Messrs. Davis, Hodge and Colwell, of Medicine Hat and Messrs. Chalkshanks, of Bowell, and Mr. Foster, of Redcliff. Mr. Theodore Fossum, the talented musician from Medicine Hat, acted as pianist during the evening. Each item on capable and pleasing manner that it would be folley to attempt to single out any particular artist for special praise. In a word, the program was one of the most classical heard in Redcliff for some time. Those in charge of the concert are greatly indebted to those who took part and wish to express their sincere thanks.

The Ladies' Aid of the church also asked us to extend their thanks to all who contributed in any way to help make the supper in the G. W. V. A. rooms the great success which it was.

On the whole the proceedings of the entire afternoon were such an unqualified success that Wednesday, September the 29th, 1920, will always stand out as one of the most important mile stones in the history of "Gordon Memorial Church." Recent. Starting out under such favorable circumstances augers well for its future development and prosperity.

The following is the completed list of soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice and was deposited in the stone:

Stephen Berthwick, John Brayley, L. F. G. Bole, (D. C. M.) Alfred Cane, E. K. Cameron, Wm. Connell, Thos. Chambers, John Compton, W. J. Chapman, Robert Dunstire. (V. C.); John Edwards, W. Eeles, T. W. Hall, W. A. Henderson, H. Hodge, J. Holland, Alfred Huxley, C. H. Johnson, G. Johnson, Ben. Jones, Isaac Jones, John Jones, (Mons Medal); J. D. Kirkpatrick, John Leach, James P. Lavelle, H. J. Lang, W. S. McLean, Duncan McLuckie, Samuel D. Miller, John Poleta, W. J. Reynolds, J. Ronald, W. E. Rea, G. A. Smith, John Saddler, J. Thornton, Lorimer Welsherham, Clarence, (M. M.); John Walker, Lytlen Wilde, (M. M. & Bar.) F. F. Woodcock.

Two Desperados Are Burned a Hay Stack

One of the most sensational manounts in the history of the west was brought to a close last Saturday when two bandits, who had been giving the police a merry chase in the Prince Albert district, were burned out of their hiding place in a hay stack.

True to their vow not to be taken alive, the two remaining of the quartet of bandits who held up the Red Deer lumber camp a week ago were dead by Inspector R. B. Tait and his posse of police late Saturday afternoon. Surrounded in a farm a haystack five miles east of Tisdale after having held the police who surrounded the stack, located in the centre of a 200 acre field for five hours. They stood "pat" to the very last and constantly returned the police fire. Their capture dead was effected only after they were riddled with rifle and revolver shots and the haystack had been set on fire.

The bodies are now hard to recognize but on the arm of one man are several tatoo marks including a Russian name which probably interprets as "Joe Trychuk." No name could be found for the other man except that it was learned from the two bandits captured alive that he went under the name of "Tony."

Bowell Farmer Suffers Heavy Loss by Fire

Last Monday afternoon while Mr. Eggerston, a farmer of the Bowell district ten on Redcliff, he received word that his buildings on the farm were on fire. As he was on foot F. H. Courtnell ran him out home in his car and on arriving there they found the neighbors busily engaged trying to get the fire under control. One building in which was stored a quantity of household furniture and other effects, was, with all its contents, completely destroyed. Another small building was also consumed and it was only the changing of the wind after the fire started that made it possible to save the house and a number of straw stacks which were in the barn yard.

The loss is estimated at about $2,000 and there was no insurance on the buildings destroyed. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Large Gold Shipments To the United States

Gold will literally pour into the United States at the end of this week. The Baltic, due to arrive tomor ow, is carrying a cargo of $16,750,000 from London, while the Imperator, on Saturday, will arrive with $9,500,000. Of the Baltic's consignment, $9,000,000 represents the first shipment of gold to the Federal Reserve bank of New York of the reserve system's holdings of approximately $111,000,000 ear-marked in the vaults of the Bank of England. The shipment on the Imperator is also for the same account.

SEED GRAIN DISTRIBUTION

The annual free distribution of samples of seed grain will be conducted as usual at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, by the Dominion Cerealist.

The following kinds of seed grain will be sent out this season:

Spring wheat (in about 5-lb. samples); white oats (about 4 lbs.); barley (about 5 lbs.); field peas (about 5 lbs.); field beans (about 2 lbs.); flax (about 2 lbs.).

Only one sample can be sent to each applicant.

Applications must be on printed forms which may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Cerealist, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, at any time after Sept. 1st.

As the stock of seed is limited, farmers are advised to apply early to avoid disappointment. Those who applied too late last year season are particularly requested to send in their names at once so that application forms may be forwarded to them. No application forms will be furnished after Feb. 1st, 1921.

The following are today's wheat prices in Winnipeg for futures: October, $2.50¼; November, $2.45½; December, $2.39¾.

Oats—October, 71c; December, 65¾c; May, 70¾c. Flax—October, $3.26; November, $3.25.

The Personal Side

PROMINENT WESTERN CHARACTERS—SOME INTERESTING ANECDOTES OF PEOPLE WE ALL KNOW

ALEXANDER GADDIE

There was a notable half breed who used to live at Crooked Lakes named Alexander Gaddie. He was of sturdy Orkney stock on his father's side which furnished so many good men to the service of the Hudson's Bay Company, and when he talked English he had a pronounced Kirkwell accent. On the maternal side he was of Indian blood, native to the region. Although an exceedingly intelligent man his sympathies were always with the people of his mother's race and he took treaty at Crooked Lakes as an Indian. He had an allotment on the reserve and was one of the first of the Indians to achieve success in farming. He had been a notable buffalo hunter and Indian fighter in the early days, and had earned a reputation for coolness and courage in some of the battles which the Metis hunters fought with the Sioux. One of his daughters, an exceedingly attractive girl, married a white man and the writer was present at the wedding feast which took place at Gaddie's house on the reserve. It was a strange gathering that sat down at the table. Colonel MacDonald, a veteran of the Wolseley campaign, and who was later Indian agent for Treaty No. 4, was the guest of honor, and several members of his family. The other Indian Department officials of the Agency were also present, and there were several other white people. Interspersed with these were all the Indian notables. Kahlikeewistahaw, the old chief of the Crooked Lake Indians, who was one of the signers of the Qu'-Appelle Treaty, although eighty years of age was a splendid figure of a man, and notable amongst the guests. Neepahpeneas who has been called by some of those best qualified to judge Indian conditions, as the finest Indian of them all, comported himself with quiet dignity and there were a number of prominent Indians from the nearby reserves. The health of the bride was proposed by Colonel MacDonald, and there were a number of speeches in English. At last Gaddie got to his feet and said in perfect English:

"I want to thank the Colonel and the white men who have spoken, for their kind words and I wish them not to take offence if I now talk to my own people." He then made an eloquent speech in Cree, in which he urged upon his Indian half brothers to accept the wisdom of the white man and to follow along his trail.

Gaddie had a son called "Jimmy" who was inclined to be rather wild. He got into bad company and started out with another half breed named Racette on a horse stealing expedition. They stole some horses from a rancher in the Qu'Appelle Valley named McLeish, and McLeish, with a mounted policeman, rode hard on their trail. The pursuers came upon the half breeds carousing in a shack and McLeish, followed by the policeman, attempted to force an entrance. A fight occurred, a gun was fired and McLeish fell mortally wounded, while the mounted policeman was badly handled. Gaddie and Racette fled to the broken land near the Qu'Appelle Valley on the Crooked Lakes and for a long time successfully evaded capture. They were eventually taken, however, and after a trial at Regina were sentenced to death.

If old Gaddie was exercised over this affair he showed no signs of perturbation. He went calmly about his daily vocations. One day Colonel MacDonald, on recepit of news from Regina, drove over to Gaddie's place and found him busy about the house. He said, "Gaddie, I am the messenger of bad news. Your boy Jimmy is to be hanged in Regina in a few days."

"Too bad, Colonel," said Gaddie, "but Jimmy was always a bad boy; will you come out and look at my wheat?" Nevertheless the old man was at the foot of the scaffold to receive the body of his executed son.

Alexander Gaddie has not been long dead. He was a typical plainsman of the old breed. Honest, intelligent and reliable; brave as a lion in the face of danger and full of patriotic sentiment for his own country and his own people, he was a good example of the race of the old time plainsman, most of whom have now passed away.

A CHIEF AMONGST THESE PEOPLE

There was a splendid Saulteaux Indian of the Crooked Lakes Agency who bore the name of O'Soup. He was a tall, stalwart, swarthy man and he carried himself like an Indian King. He was, I think, one of the most dignified men in the world, and his eye beamed with intelligence and energy. He was a great hunter and never settled down to farming pursuits so much encouraged by the Indian Department. Even after the advent of the railways he would make long hunting excursions to the remotest part of the country, seeming to delight in life in the wilderness.

Sir Richard Lake, the present Lieut. Governor of the province of Saskatchewan, relates an incident, slight in itself, but very significant in connection with this man.

The two half breed murderers, Gaddie and Racette, had been arrested charged with the murder of the Qu'Appelle Valley rancher, named McLeish. Sir Richard was then a young man and had just received his commission as Justice of the Peace. He was one of the magistrates before whom the accused were brought. He relates how O'Soup was called to the witness stand and asked through an interpreter if he was a leader among the Indians. The court room was crowded with interested Indian spectators; and O'Soup drew himself up, and with a gesture of indescribable dignity towards the Indians, said, "Yes, I am a chief amongst these people."

He had, however, one fault, he was rather addicted to the "fire water" of the white man and on one occasion, not so many years ago, allowed it to get so much the better of him that he lay out in very cold weather, with the result that he lost the use of one of his legs, which, if the writer is not mistaken, had to be amputated.* He was at that time living some place near Fort Qu'Appelle and he wished to return to his home in Crooked Lakes. The Indian Agent did not think it well for him, in his feeble condition, to take the journey, and permission was refused. He went into the bush and with his axe, constructed a rude crutch and started to hobble home. He was, however, followed and brought back. He died not so many years ago. He was one of the Indians from the west who was present at the consecration of the late Archbishop Langevin at St. Boniface and he made a speech there in his own tongue that those familiar with the Cree language declared was a masterpiece of studied eloquence.

HOW RIEL NEARLY ESCAPED THE GALLOWS

It is now pretty well known that the late Sir John Macdonald was very reluctant to have Louis Riel hanged. There was, of course, a strong feeling against the rebel leader in the west. He had been guilty of treason and making war against the government of Canada; but the Metis themselves, although vigorous and enterprising fighters, had carried on the war with a fairly decent regard to the amenities. Indeed on many occasions they had intervened to curb the barbarities of their Indian allies. Of course Riel's great offence was in having evoked the aid of the Indians, and thus exposing the country to the horrors of an Indian uprising. There was no doubt that the halfbreeds had many real grievances and that Ottawa had long turned a deaf ear to them. Quebec was aroused in their favor, and Laurier, in the House of Commons, had made a passionate and eloquent plea in their behalf.

Sir John was naturally inclined to clemency but the opposition practically dared him to hang Riel.

As the time for the execution approached, a plan was evolved to enable Riel to escape, which was said to have been convived at by the authorities.

There was a well known French-Canadian named Pascal Bonneau living in Regina at the time. He was a strong political supporter of the government, and he had little sympathy with the rebellion. He knew Riel well, however, and had some sympathy with his miserable condition.

It was arranged that a few days before the date set for the execution he was to establish relays of fast horses every ten miles between Regina and the American boundary; arrangements were to be made to get Riel out of the Regina police barracks; and given half an hours start not all the police in the country could catch him before he reached United States, where as a political offender he would be safe.

All arrangements were made, but the plan was disclosed by a relative of the unfortunate rebel leader, who was himself in some danger for his share in the rebellion, and who doubtless sought to obtain favor from the authorities. So Riel went to his ignominious death.

After the execution the body was taken to the Roman Catholic church, which at that time was situated on the present site of the Credit Foncier Building.

It was prepared for burial by Mr. Bonneau, and W. G. Pettingell, still a well known business man of the provincial capital. Mr. Pettingell told the writer a few days ago that after the work was done and the body interred in a shallow grave beneath the floor of the church, he and Mr. Bonneau adjourned to the Palmer House bar to seek a little spirituous stimulent. As Mr. Bonneau drained his glass he said, "I wish I were as sure of salvation as he is now."

Riel's remains rested in the church for several days under the constant guardianship of Mr. Bonneau's son. At last one snowy night he received word to remove it to a box car that was to be left on the siding east of Broad Street. Care had to be exercised because local feeling was much inflamed against the dead man and there was reason to anticipate a demonstration.

Young Bonneau waited until it was quite dark, then he dug up Riel's body and taking it on his back, plodded out in the snow through what is now Victoria Park, and going by the outskirts of the town, reached the box car, where he laid the earthly remains of that restless spirit upon some straw. When the express came along it picked up the car. The young man maintained his vigil all the way to Winnipeg.

The last resting place of Louis Riel is in the cemetery of the Cathedral at St. Boniface, on the banks of the Red River, and is marked by a stone monument upon which is engraven the simple inscription "Riel."

Useful Writing Table

Useful articles are like useful people—they're always admired. And so it is with this little writing table, so convenient to milady, which was contrived by a most ingenious mind. The little inventor didn't have much money, but did have brains which developed this adorable little writing desk out of a small kitchen table. And she uses it in her bedroom where it best suits her convenience, with a drawer to hold her private letters and where she can write at her own free will. This is how she worked the wonder.

She bought an ordinary kitchen table, measuring 3 feet by 18 inches, with a drawer in front, at a cost of $5. It was on good plain lines and had straight legs—an admirable asset. A carpenter made her little brackets as supports, one for each side of the table. These she fixed on herself with small hinges and screws. She puts them up when she is doing writing that requires extra space for papers and down when not in use, to save space.

The rest of her room was furnished in oak, so she stained the table to match and then wax polished it. The china handles on the drawer she replaced with others of metal in a good old design, and partitioned the drawer itself with little sections of wood so that the papers in t could be kept in order.

An ugly light wood stationery box in her possession was then covered with pretty cretonne in a dark color, with a flap arranged at the back to keep the dust from the note paper. It was edged with a tiny gold band of braid. She then covered an old blotter with the same patterned cretonne, with the result that she, who couldn't afford to buy such a bit of luxury in the stores, now possesses an even better article through very little effort.

"My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon"

Drawn By NELL BRINKLEY

. . . and we're going to be married quite soon." The girl with a dream sweetheart—and no real one must have hummed it that way—but the girl who has a live one to paddle alongside of, turns the funny old song around the other way and sings in the moonshine, "The Man in the Moon is My Sweetheart"—for his face is just about everywhere—and most particularly in that lovely orb of silver, that lovely bubble of romance that floats up and up, out of dark trees, into the sky-sea—to look down into the windows and the hearts of the people who love and are beloved.

The moon spreads magic—and the commonplace, everyday face of the man a girl loves is then fitly held there, for the face that stirs on one else in the world, spreads magic, too, and conjures dreams for the girl who turns up her eyes to his face and the moon's.

"Oh, silver, brooding moon, the 'man's' face in your circle is my lover's, mirrored bright on your polished shield, to glimmer and smile down at me, the long ray of your moon-beams that strikes jewels through my window pane is his reaching hand—adoring—saying, 'Love? . . . and I laugh and say, 'HERE!'"

A WEEKLY CAUSERIE OF MATTERS—TREATED IN LIGHTER VEIN

THE CITY OF PRINCE ALBERT — THE OLDEST TOWN IN THE NORTH WEST — DANGEROUS DAYS—A SCHOOL BOY CLASSIC.

I was in Prince Albert last week. I have not visited the northern city for more than twelve years, and was more than surprised at its progressive appearance. There were many good stores and business places and the public buildings were imposing and creditable. There is a splendid bridge across the Saskatchewan near where the old ferry used to ply; and the broad reaches of the noble river and the landscape which alternates between cultivated farms, rolling grassy pasture, and forest, makes a grateful relief to eyes long accustomed to the flat outlines of the level prairie.

* * * * * * * * *

Prince Albert was really the first town established in the north west. I think the first settler there was James Isbister, the descendant of an Orkneyman in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company. This man was afterwards one of the delegation who went to Montana to bring Riel to the Saskatchewan prior to the rebellion of 1885. It was some time in the sixties that Isbister built his first shack where the city of Prince Albert now stands. Shortly afterwards he was joined by some native families, and a little later a Presbyterian mission was established there, and the place took on the semblance of a town.

* * * * * * * * *

During the stirring times of the Riel rebellion, Prince Albert was at one time in a dangerous position. The rebels were concentrated at Duck Lake, where they had successfully withstood an attack by the police; Batoche, which was a large half breed settlement, was near at hand; there were many Indian reserves in the vicinity; and Prince Albert lay open to attack.

* * * * * * * * *

Many of the able bodied men, most of whom were familiar with the use of arms, banded themselves together as volunteers and guarded the approaches to the town. All sorts of rumors were flying about, to the effect that Indians and rebels were advancing upon the place; and there was a good deal of alarm. This condition was relieved by the forced march which was made by Colonel Irvine with a considerable body of Mounted Police through the snow, from Regina. After the battle at Duck Lake Irvine was joined by the Carlton detachment under Major Crozier, and Prince Albert was safe from danger.

* * * * * * * * *

Although this old settlement has taken on the semblance of a modern city, there is still some of the atmosphere of the old days about it. The goods of the frontier are still displayed in the shop windows; men on horseback ride down the streets with a fine contempt for motor cars; and black bearded halfbreeds, and moccasined Indians are still to the fore. It was not so long ago that ptarmigan might be shot in winter within the city limits; and moose are to be hunted within a day's travel. The trackless woods lie to the north and the hunter may yet find a virgin land.

I found one of my boys the other day reading that school boy classic "Tom Brown's School Days." I picked it up and ran through some of its pages. What memories of youth it conjured up —of the Bigside football match; of the cross country run with East and Tom; of the great Doctor Arnold; of Flashman the bully; and many another scene dear to the heart of a boy. But I think the most moving event in the book is the fight which Tom waged with Slogger Williams, and the causes that led up to it. In the description of the school scene which was the prelude to the fight there is an episode, that to my mind is true and touching. Arthur the gentle, tempermental lad was construing that most beautiful of secular passages, the lament of Argive Helen; and the boy touched to the heart by the pure beauty of the words of the most beautiful woman of all time broke down and wept. The result was that Slogger Williams was called upon to construe and he made a wretched hash of it. He was punished, and it was when he attempted to visit his vengeance upon Arthur that Tom stepped in. A challenge was passed and the boys of Rugby school flocked to see Tom Brown, their pet craftsman, fight a round. The book is a noble one and might with advantage be read by many of our western boys.

Literature was in its infancy when old Homer wrote of Helen, and of Troy, and all the great galaxy of Grecian heroes; and with all our modern knowledge of style, and history, and mythology, we have been unable to improve upon his stirring tales and matchless phrases. What a wonderful epic is the tale of Ulysses the Wanderer—what adventures he achieved and how, when he came home to his island kingdom of Ithaca and slew the suitors of his wife with the great bow that sang of war, he could not rest, but hungered for the strange lands and strange peoples that lay beyond the western stars. Tennyson writes well of the old Wanderer in the following lines:

* * *

ULYSSES

It little profits that an idle king,
By this still hearth, among these barren crags,
Match'd with an aged wife, I mete and dole
Unequal laws unto a savage race,
That hoard and sleep, and feed, and know not me.
I cannot rest from travel; I will drink
Life to the lees: all times I have enjoy'd
Greatly, have suffer'd greatly, both with those
That loved me and alone; on shore, and when
Thro' scudding drifts the rainy Hyades
Vext the dim sea: I am become a name;
For always roaming with a hungry heart
Much have I seen and known; cities of men
And manners, climates, councils, governments,
Myself not least, but honour'd of them all;
And drunk delight of battle with my peers,
Far on the ringing plains of windy Troy.
I am a part of all that I have met:
Yet all experience is an arch wherethro'
Gleams that untravell'd world, whose margin fades
Forever and forever when I move.

* * *

There lies the port: the vessel puffs her sail;
There gloom the dark broad seas. My mariners,
Souls that have toil'd, and wrought and thought with me
That ever with a frolic welcome took
The thunder and the sunshine and opposed
Free hearts, free foreheads—you and I are old;
Old age hath yet his honour and his toil;
Death closes all: but something ere the end,
Some work of noble note may yet be done,
Not unbecoming men that strove with gods.
The lights begin to twinkle from the rocks:
The long day wanes: the slow moon climbs: the deep
Moans round with many voices. Come, my friends,
'Tis not too late to seek a newer world.
Push off and sitting well in order smite
The sounding furrows; for my purpose holds
To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
Of all the western stars until I die.

A FEW RAMBLING REMARKS BY A PRAIRIE WOMAN

A NEW HOME
(By Charlotte Becker.)

Here anything may happen: joy or grief
Cross swift the threshold of each paneled door,
Light steps or weary tap along each floor.
Here genius hold some eager souls in fief,
Or fame, capricious, come and go, as brief
As any laurels bloom. Here newborn life
May wake to know the great world's urge and strife;
Or love may teach some doubting heart belief.

No sorrow haunts these rooms so bright and bare,
Where one may deck the future as one will;
No ghastly, wistful voice drifts down the stair,
No memories grope at a window sill:
But here waits all that hope may yet define—
Ah, Fortune, let its peace make home a shrine!

Poor litti genius! Prodded and goaded and practised into a celebrity at an age when she should be gay and irresponsible and not know the meaning of the smiles or frowns of the public. Envious! Are you envious when you hear of some wonderful child who is holding audiences spellbound and drawing attention of professors at a time when she should be kept quietly at home, fi she is a genius, more quietly than the average Tom or Mary who makes no pretence of being extraordinary? Does it make you envious and do you picture your own Tom or Mary in the same position and sigh because it is not so? Foolish, foolish! Rather be thankful that your children are normal and healthy, gifted with all their faculties and pity, pity with all your heart the much-lauded poor little genius.

* * *

Genius is a rare and delicate plant. It is a gift which should be reverenced with care. It does not need to be forced. There has been story after story of marvelous youthful prodigies who have flashed into publicity for a year or so and then have faded into obscurity or passed out. In most cases I believe that instead of being restrained these little ones have been pushed, pushed, with the result that they have broken down under the strain and the delicate nerves have never been able to respond again to the revelation of the genius within.

* * *

Perhaps you have a genius in your midst. Be gentle with him or with her. Guard carefully the years of training which should and must come between childhood and the time when the message will inevitably be given to the world. Have no fear, remember genius cannot be hidden forever, and the slower and quieter its development, the more beautiful and strong its fruition. You do not want it to bloom suddenly and fade away as unexpectedly. Remember, whatever may be said to the contrary, true genius must have lived and suffered; true genius must understand in its deeper sense the meaning of life. What child has, in the broader sense, lived and suffered? No child, therefore, can be a true genius. There have been many children hailed as such, however, when in reality they were merely youthful prodigies, in other words intensely precocious. Oftentimes if the youthful prodigy were intelligently and carefully guarded instead of being continually forced, like a hothouse plant, he or she might develop into a genius to delight the world, although, of course, there is still a vast difference between a genius and a celebrity.

* * *

Common sense tells us that the nerves of children, unusually precocious must be more than ordinarily highly strung and sensitive and they do not need to be forced. They should not be allowed to practise, practise for long hours at an instrument; if their health is cared for, they have many years before them in which to practise. Rather should they be sent to romp in the fresh air with bright, young companions and allowed to forget their wonderful talent, the continual dwelling upon which only serves to make them conceited and priggish.

* * *

The other day I read an interesting article called "Tracks" and it enumerated the different tracks which different individuals left behind them. The untidy person's tracks for instance, everything in a heap behind them; the mother's tracks, mended stockings and garments. The sharp-tongued person's tracks, she who never comes to pay a visit without leaving a worried frown on her hostess' face and pinpricks in her heart; the kindly person's tracks; she who, when she calls to visit the sick leaves a few flowers and some nice bright thoughts which have lightened the care on the sufferer's face, and last but not least, she who is in touch with Him who is the great Giver of every good and perfect gift; she leaves the tracks of peace and joy behind. I wonder what tracks you and I leave each day as we unconsciously go our different ways?

I have not had very many answers to my request for letters and I do hope that perhaps soon when the farm work is easing off that our readers will find more time to write to me. I should like to receive letters on any subjects which may interest you, and should there be anything particularly you would like to know, any particular recipes for instance, or answers to any special problem, I shall be glad to reply. Kindly address your letters to "Prairie Woman," 903 McCallum Hill Building, Regina.

FAIRYLAND

Know ye the road to Fairyland?—
'Tis far and far away:
Beyond the Gulf of Time it lies,
Distant and dim its hills arise:
Our childish hearts and childish eyes
Knew where its valleys lay.

Know ye the woods of Fairyland
That was so dread to see?
Deep in their shades great dragons roam,
And many an ogre has his home,
And in their caverns dwarf and gnome
Hold fearsome revelry.

Know ye the towers of Fairyland
That rise so white and fair?
Like frozen foam their turrets seem,
And in their halls, where jewels gleam,
The Fairy Princess lies adream
Amid her golden hair.

A SERIES OF ARTICLES DEALING WITH VARIOUS WESTERN QUESTIONS

ETERNAL YOUTH

There is nothing we lose with such regret as youth. We are told that it is natural to grow old and perhaps it is, but you see the vital man or woman of middle age, fight so hard at the prospect of surrendering the things of their prime. It is one of the tragedies of life that we must grow old and lose our mental and physical powers, with the inevitable prospect before us of going down to the grave when our tale of years is told.

Ever since the days of mythology humanity has been looking for a fountain of youth, something that would preserve us with all the hopes, with all the illusions and with all the strength of early manhood and womanhood.

In the ancient days of Greece, perpetual youth was supposed to be an attribute of the Gods; the centuries did not put a single wrinkle in the matchless face of Venus, nor did Cupid ever grow up. Ponce de Leon, one of the Spanish explorers believed that he had found the fountain of youth in Florida; historians, however, had very little sympathy for the pathos of his quest and have laughed at him ever since. Almost everyone wants to retain their youth; but age, decay and disillusion have seemed so inevitable that humanity has, in the past accepted its destiny as inevitable. Then, of course, we have the Scriptural dictum that our years shall be "three score and ten, and perhaps by reason of strength four score;" and we must admit that it has been pretty generally correct.

Away back, about 1890, a French doctor named Brown Sequard declared that he had discovered the elixir of life. He had been a physiologist of the nervous system at Harvard university. After conducting many researches he injected into his body a serum made from the secretions of certain animals. The results were so remarkable that the attention of the scientific world was attracted. Brown Sequard was, at that time, seventy-two years of age, and the result of his experiments was that he took on the semblance of a man in the early forties.

A close investigation was made of the serum and medical men, always inclined to be somewhat conservative, discredited it. The Harvard professor died in Paris at the age of seventy-seven and his elixir was regarded as a joke.

A careful research has been conducted and science has come to the conclusion that with proper care there is no reason whatsoever that a human being's life may not be prolonged in its full vigor until considerably over one hundred years.

Some time in 1910, Dr. Carrol, a scientist of unquestioned reputation and conducting researches under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute, took the fragment of the heart of a chicken which, in the natural course of events had not yet broken the egg shell and by means of injecting into it the serum taken from the living animals, has succeeded in keeping it alive until the present day. Among other experiments which have been conducted, this is probably the most noteworthy one, and scientific medical men are rapidly coming to the conclusion that senility and death can certainly be arrested and may, perhaps be preventable occurrences.

A French physician named Doctor Varonoff, who was in charge of a French hospital during the war, had great experience in transplanting bones, tissues and organs from bodies newly dead, or living, into other living bodies. He carried on, at the same time, experiments with animals. The results he achieved were astonishing.

He took glands from young animals and placed them in old decrepit animals, practically dying of old age. The result was that in a few months these senile objects bloomed forth in health, strength and youth. He took the glands out again and the animals at once became old.

The same results have been produced with human beings who have become young when the glands from apes have been planted in their bodies.

There are, of course, many exaggerations in connection with such a subject, but nevertheless there is enough data in some of the medical scientific magazines to justify certain of their claims, and there is not the least doubt in the world that in view of these modern discoveries, old age can be considerably postponed.

For a number of years certain ailments and decays which usually come from old age, have been known to be cured, or at least ameliorated by the use of secretions from the glands of apes.

There is one notable instance of this in the person of a very prominent man who, for many years, was a notable figure in the province of Saskatchewan; but these remedies have been practised almost entirely by some French physicians and the public have not been quite aware of their significance.

There is no question but that these discoveries must be taken seriously and it is a matter that will affect almost everybody.

Science has destroyed the ravages of enteric, typhus, yellow fever and diphtheria and if the investigators have again managed to discover a great physiological truth, it may have a most wonderful effect on humanity. It is, in any case, a most interesting subject.

We would again remind those who failed to get their names registered for the prohibition vote, that they still have another chance to do so by applying to Mr. Baird, revising officer, at the time and place mentioned elsewhere in this issue. There are always those who neglect to matters of this kind at the proper time. Then when it is too late they blame everybody but themselves. In this matter it is all up to the individual himself or herself to see that their names are on the list. Take a look at the lists which are now posted up and make sure your own name is on it.

Those who intend voting on the prohibition plebiscite which will be submitted to the electorate on the 25th of October should make it a point to familiarize themselves with the question from all its angles. They should also study the wording of the ballot carefully so that no mistake may be made in the marking of it. The question to be voted on is: "Shall the importation or bringing of intoxicating liquors into the province be forbidden." If you want to stop the importation of liquor into this province you mark your cross opposite the word "Yes." If you want it to continue as it is now you put your cross opposite the word "No."

TALES OF OUR OWN COUNTRY

SOME CHRONICLES OF THE DAYS OF THE WAR PARTY AND THE BUFFALO.—STORIES TOLD AROUND THE FIRES OF THE HUNTING CAMPS OF BYGONE DAYS

The R.N.W.M.P. In The Great North West

SETTLING THE NORTH WEST —THE CRIME BELT—THE BULLOCK TRAGEDY—WONDERFUL WORK OF THE POLICE—THE WEST MADE SAFE.

The early days of the twentieth century saw a large influx of new settlers to the northwest. One of the first regions to be extensively settled was the district which had been opened up by the construction of the Calgary and Edmonton roads which lay between the Bow River and the Saskatchewan. This was a rich and fertile territory and soon attracted a large emigration from the south. The first American settlers who came in were not of the class which a few years afterwards came from Iowa and the middle west to settle the Saskatchewan valley and also into the region in question. The country was still a frontier and attracted many wandering characters who were unfamiliar with British justice and British institutions. Many of these people believed that the same latitude would be allowed them to commit lawless offences as existed in the unorganized portions of the United States where frontier conditions still obtained. They soon, however, by means of the activities of the North West Mounted Police, learned their limitations, and the region became as law-abiding as any other portion of Canada.

The Crime Belt

During the time some of these newcomers were getting their education several affairs occurred which indicated the necessity of the strong hand of justice. It was this, perhaps that led the late Paddy Nolan to name the district "The Crime Belt."

The Bullock Family

There was a family named Bullock operating a small farm about midway between Calgary and Edmonton. They were fairly decent, hard-working people, and had come from one of the western states; their great grandfather had been the British general of that name and they rather prided themselves on their connection.

The Prodigal

There was a son in the family, however, who had been to a certain extent a wanderer and a vagabond and he had never been with his family in Canada. He flitted from construction camp to construction camp in the western states only working long enough to get enough money to enable him to engage in some dissipation. He had made friends with a workman and he had confided to him his desire to visit his parents' farm in Western Canada, but also said he hadn't the money to undertake the journey. The friend, who was of a thrifty nature, had two or three hundred dollars stored away and he offered to bear the expenses of the journey. Accordingly the two young men arrived in Calgary and took the Calgary and Edmonton train for the nearest point to the farm. When they arrived there they set out to reach the place in the darkness, but only young Bullock arrived at his parents' home where he received every manifestation of welcome. He appeared to be in possession of money and told stories of how things had been prospering with him. He was quite generous with his funds and gave presents to all the members of his family. After a visit extending for some time he said his farewells and returned to the States.

A Dead Body

Shortly after his departure, some children, I think, who were looking for cows discovered in a slough the remains of a dead body. The R.N.W.M.P. investigated, a post mortem was held and there was little doubt that the dead man had met with foul play. A plain clothes member of the force was assigned to investigate, and slowly and carefully a chain of circumstantial evidence was built up. It was discovered that the dead man had been Bullock's companion and the evidence pointed to the fact that Bullock had killed him while on the way to the farm. A warrant was issued for the murderer, but he seemed to have disappeared from off the face of the earth. The district was exceedingly aroused over the crime and the order went forth that the murderer had to be captured.

Finding The Murderer

Accordingly a plain clothes member of the force went to the States and after a wide search succeeded in locating Bullock working in a railway construction camp, not far from Great Falls, Montana. With the assistance of the United States authorities he was arrested and extradited and brought to Edmonton for trial. The trial disclosed that he was undoubtedly guilty and he was sentenced to death. He had killed his benefactor for a small sum of money, I think something under $300.00. He was apparently a congenital criminal and of a very bad type.

The Execution

There was rather a curious incident in connection with his execution. The regular hangman was indisposed or urgently engaged elsewhere and it was necessary to find someone else to officiate at the execution. The sheriff was in a quandry; the man had to be hanged and there was no one to do it. He was constably relieved, however, on receiving an application for the job from a man named Binkley who lived in Ponoka. This man claimed that he had been an executioner in Ohio and that he had "worked off" over eighty criminals. Bullock was hanged in the North West Mounted Police yard at Fort Saskatchewan, one bitterly cold winter's morning. He appeared to be of an insensate type and entirely oblivious of the position. He ate an enormous breakfast and took full advantage of all the good things usually allowed to a condemned man. The scaffold had been erected in two compartments, in one of which was the trap and in the other a stone and some chairs. The newspaper man whose duty it was to witness the execution gathered in the little compartment in which the scaffold was situated with the ominous noose dangling overhead. A few minutes before the hour set for the hanging Bullock was brought into the other compartment where there was a fire and where his spiritual adviser was endeavoring to arouse in him a sense of his condition. Punctually to the hour he was brought into the death compartment and then the executioner walked briskly on the scene. He was dressed in sumart suit, with a billycock hat and was smoking a cigar.

"Morning gents," he said, then he walked up to Bullock and said "stand here my man." Bullock shuffled over and stood on the trap. Binkley adjusted the noose in the cap. He laid down his cigar on a window ledge and turned to those present.

"Well gents," he said, "I guess I'm set now, and he clicked the lever with his foot. Bullock shot out of sight and Binkley picked up his cigar which was still alight and walked out.

Western Canada Made Safe

The work of the North West Mounted Police in connection with this case was beyond praise. They had only the most slender of clues to go upon. Investigations had to be carried on which covered not only the North West but a number of the adjacent States, but intelligence and patience was brought to bear and eventually justice was done. It was nothing out justice of this nature which curbed lawlessness usual to the frontier, and made Western Canada one of the safest countries in which to live. The reproachful name of the "Crime Belt" has long become but a memory and there is no more peaceful and prosperous agricultural region in the whole continent

My Dear Boys and Girls:

This week I am printing my first letter from a boy. It seems that the girls have been much ahead of the boys regarding our competition, but as so far, we have only received one boy's letter I felt I must print it. Each week I shall print one letter from our readers, so when you write to me, you must watch carefully as some week you will see your own letter in print.

We are having beautiful fall weather just now and it is just the kind of weather for delightful outdoor games. I am sure you are all anxious to make the very most of these bright days knowing that the long winter will be with us before many weeks have passed. Not that the winter need have any real terrors for true prairie boys and girls, because there are some lovely days even in the winter, the beauty of which people who live in milder climates where they have more rain and slush cannot realize. What is finer than the lovely frosty atmosphere which prevails on a bright winter day when boys and girls can skate and slide and have all sorts of fun to bring the bright color into their faces and make them strong and healthy. I suppose you nearly all have sleighs and look forward to using them.

You will remember that I told you about my little nephew watching the children toboggan in the hole near his house last winter. Well, they have just commenced to build a house in that very hole, and although his mother is very glad that a house is being built there, yet I am sure a lot of children will miss the fun they had slipping up and down on their sleighs.

Hoping that I shall have more letters from you this week and with much love, I remain, as ever,

Yours affectionately,

AUNT BETTY.

Address your letters "Aunt Betty," 903 McCallum Hill Building, Regina, Sask.

September 5th, 1920.

Dear Aunt Betty:

I thought I would write to your interesting club.

I go to school. I am twelve years old and I am in grade four. We play squat-tag at school.

I live on a farm. We are six miles from town and two miles from school. We have nineteen horses and two colts, and nine cattle and three cats and a dog. We have no car but I hope we will get one soon. I read the children's corner every week. Well, I hope to get a prize for my letter, so good-bye.

THE PLOVER

It was a beautiful June morning, and Uncle John was obliged to drive out to his farm.

"Would you like to come with me, Toddy?" he asked, as the horse was brought round to the door.

"Yes, sir!" Toddy answered, eagerly. "I just guess I would."

The sun was bright and the country road was green and sweet with delightful odors, and Toddy made believe in his mind he was a little colt he saw running round in the fields. Uncle John was driving along at a smart trot, when all of a sudden he stopped the horse quickly and cried out:

"Toddy, do you see that?"

And there, right under the pony's feet almost, were a whole family of little plovers.

Toddy was so delighted that he could not speak for a minute.

The tiny birds were just as quiet as could be, because their mother had taught them not to make a noise when any danger came near them. But they were dreadfully frightened, for, you see, they had been nearly run over.

"You may get out, Toddy, and run along the road for a piece," said Uncle John.

And then Toddy saw that the little plovers were not alone, but that their father and mother were with them. The minute Toddy's feet touched the ground, the old birds began to make a fuss. Possibly they thought he was a cruel, bad boy that was coming to steal their birdies.

The mother bird "cheeped," and all her little family followed her into the grass at the roadside; but the father bird ran along in front of Toddy, back and forth, and seemed to want the little boy to play with him.

Uncle John smiled.

"Try to catch him, Toddy," he said.

Toddy tried, but found it was not an easy thing to do. It was queer, too, for the plover dragged one wing along in the dust and seemed to be quite lame; but just as soon as the little boy would get near the bird and think he could put his hand on it, he would find it was a little ahead of him all the time.

He followed it along the road for three or four minutes. Uncle John driving slowly after him, till all of a sudden, when the father plover thought the mother bird had had time to get their wee family through the fence into the field, and to hide them safely in the long grass, he rose straight up into the air and away he flew back to them before Toddy had time to think.

"Wasn't it too bad to fool a little boy like that?" Uncle John said, as Teddy climbed back into the buggy. "You see, the father bird was only pretending he was lame, so you would think you could catch him. He knew the mother plover would be hiding the little ones. If you were to go back now, you couldn't find them anywhere."

"Oh," said Toddy, "but I wouldn't have hurt them! Why did they want to hide from me?"

"Well, you see," said Uncle John, "they didn't know you had an Aunt Hannah, who has taught you to be kind to every living thing."

"That's so," said Toddy, soberly, and he wondered if he would ever know as much as Uncle John did.

THE PRICE OF SUCCESS

From an unknown author comes the all important question to every seeker of Success:

You want success. Are you willing to pay the price for it?

How much discouragement can you stand?

How much bruising can you take?

How long can you hang on in the face of obstacles?

Have you the grit to try to do what others have failed to do?

Have you the nerve to attempt things that the average man would never dream of tackling?

Have you the persistence to keep on trying after repeated failures?

Can you cut out luxuries? Can you do without things that others consider necessities?

Can you go up against skepticism, ridicule, friendly advice to quit, without flinching?

Can you keep your mind steadily on the single object you are pursuing, resisting all temptations to divide your attention?

Have you the patience to plan all the work you attempt; the energy to wade through masses of detail; the accuracy to overlook no point, however small, in planning or executing?

Are you strong to finish as well as quick to start?

Success is sold in the open market. You can buy it. I can buy it. Any man can buy it who is willing to pay the price.

Pages from the Diary of a War Wife

A TALE OF EVERYDAY PEOPLE AND THEIR HUMAN EXPERIENCES

SOME OF THE SORROWS WHICH THE WAR IMPOSED ON A WAITING WOMAN

Little Philip and I are on the train bound for the great West. Albert sent us a telegram just as soon as he located some rooms for us. From the letter which followed, I do not imagine that the rooms will be anything very brilliant, but it is best for us to get settled right away. I am no believer in a wife living in comfort at a great distance from the man she has promised to stand by "for richer for poorer" and I never could comprehend the viewpoint of those wives who will "summer" it in some happier clime while their husbands are standing the hardship and the freezing of a rigorous climate. Why marry a man at all if you cannot stand by him. We marry for "better or worse" and if the "worse" means living in some ungodly climate, then we should live in it, and if not prepared to do this, a woman should not marry. And so although I understand that the western climate is much sterner and harder than the eastern, yet I am gladly going to face it, because I want to help Albert and believe that if I steadfastly make up my mind, we shall accomplish what is so much to be envied in these days, a real home, and I do want to make a real "home" for little Philip to grow up in. Life seems to me a very purposeless thing if we do not try to make it worth while for some little one, and when that little one is your very own, there is an even more sacred responsibility.

As I gaze on the sleeping face of the little fellow, so unconscious of the tempest that has been passing through his mother's heart, I feel condemned in the presence of his innocence and pray that the God who guards over little children may keep me ever from any action which would humiliate me in his sight, and bring me from the pedestal whereon each little child will place his mother, if she will only let him. It is so easy to obtain reverence from little ones. Their unsullied hearts and minds are open and unsuspicious, they are looking so eagerly for perfection in the being whom they love; indeed they cannot see her faults. I said to Philip the other day, "You mustn't cry like a baby Philip; you know you are mother's little man now." He was silent for a while, and then as I went to tuck him up for the night I could see that that wonderful thought was still in his mind, as he looked up at me and said, "I'se our little man, isn't I?" and for several days after he would mention proudly to the other inmates of the house that he was "Muvver's little man."

Plans are being formed for raising a state loan of $2,500,000 for Palestine. The purpose of the loan is to gather an income for Palestine and the entire amount is first to be absorbed by Jewish bankers in New York and they will offer it for public subscription. The loan will be raised through the British government or direct by the Palestine administration.

Many Deaths in Canada by Fire

Loss of life in Canada through fire was slightly less in 1919 than in some former years, according to the annual report of the superintendent of insurance companies, other than life insurance companies, issued recently. Deaths due to fire during the year numbered 239. Of this number 139 lost their lives in burning buildings, 35 through kindling fires with coal oil or gasoline, 24 through ignition of clothing from open fires and lights, 23 through playing with matches, 14 in bush fires and 12 by explosions.

Premier Made Member of Privy Council

Premier Meighen has just been made a King's Privy Councillor. This is an honor which has been expected. It carries with it the title of "Right Honorable," which belongs to a small, but distinguished company of Canadians. It is less common than knighthood and is in no way a contravention of the resolution of the House of Commons against titles.

Baby Born on C.P.R. Train

On a C.P.R. train en route to Regina, a baby boy was born a few days ago. His mother was being taken by his father to the hospital. All efforts were made at Holdfast to get a doctor, and when these efforts failed the engineer was urged to run the train as fast as possible. He did. One passenger estimated the speed of the train as sixty-five miles an hour. Women passengers on the train did everything to assist the young mother and at Dilke she was met by a nurse from a private hospital and removed on a stretcher to the hospital, and it is reported that she is doing well.

General Booth to Come to Regina

General Bramwell Booth, commander in chief throughout the world of the Salvation Army, is coming to Canada, and arrangements have been made for him to spend a week in Winnipeg addressing public meetings from November 6th to 11th. His first address will be given to the Canadian Club of Toronto on September 26. , He will then go on to British Columbia.

Unknown Man Meets Death

Unaimed by friends an unidentified man lies dead at Bunchanan, Sask., as the result of a threshing engine falling on him from a truck. The man was one of a party of workers assisting in unloading the engine. Two men were working together on one side of the truck while a third was on the other side, prying the engine up in order to get a tie from underneath. Suddenly the engine tipped and the victim of the accident slipped in the mud, the engine falling upon him and crushing him to death instantly. The provincial police have no clue to the man's identity.

Boy Instantly Killed

Joseph Mock, a twelve year old newsboy was instantly killed recently when passing under the new building being built by the Regina Trading Company on Scarth Street of that city. There were no witnesses to the accident, but it is thought the boy had been inside the building and was coming out of one of the doors leading into the lane close to Twelfth Avenue when he met his death. The wagon iron which was the cause of the accident, is twelve feet long by seven feet wide, and fell on the little lad from the third story, killing him immediately.

Condemning Milk Factories Closed

As a result of the recent hearing before the Board of Commerce of the milk producers' request for $3.25 per eight gallon can as the winter price for milk, comes the announcement that all the Canadian milk condensing factories are to close down indefinitely at the end of this month because the market is overstocked with the products and there is no demand. Local representatives fear heavy losses and the closing of the condensing factories means that a large quantity of milk will be in the market this winter.

Alone in Death

So recently, no doubt the centre of a gay throng, the poor little movie actress, Olive Thomas, is left severely alone by her companions in the dignity and majesty of the last great summons. Her body was taken to Holy Trinity Church, Paris, where it will remain until shipment to America is arranged for. The Rev. Dr. Beekman who vigorously denounced the type of resort visited by the girl just before her death, received the body. There was no service, Jack Pickford, husband of the late Miss Thomas, is expected in Paris from London, in a few days.

France Sends Gold to U.S.

An instalment which is to be applied toward France's half share of the $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan, arrived in the U.S. recently aboard the French liner Havre.

After Profiteers

The new Italian premier, Giolitti has initiated a campaign against the "sharks" as profiteers in good clothing are called, as a result of which they have been heavily fined or committed to prison whenever detected. Large fortunes have been accumulated by many of these extortioners by selling foodstuffs secretly at exorbitant prices.

Discover Wild Bison

A herd of wild bison, numbering over 1,000 animals, said to be the last herd of the North American continent, has been discovered roaming in the country of the Mackenzie River basin. F. H. Kitto, D.S.L., exploring engineer of the natural intelligence branch of the department of the interior, Ottawa, is the discoverer, and he states that he received reports of another herd equally as large further north.

Cost of Living Going Down

It is reported that the crest in the high cost of living has been reached and that now the figures are taking a downward trend. This is indicated by the reports of the labor department, which also observes living costs throughout the world and states that internationally the ebb has started. In Japan last winter prices went crashing. In Canada, in retail prices the average cost of a weekly family budget of staple foods in some sixty cities was $16.42 at the middle of August, compared with $16.84 in July; $14.43 in August a year ago and $7.63 in August 1914. The decrease for the month was due chiefly to a drop in potatoes, but there were also slight decreases in meats and increases in eggs, butter and sugar, also in wood and coal oil.

After Punishment—Takes Poison

Jessie Vaughan, aged thirteen, grieving over a whipping inflicted by her mother, ran upstairs, in her home, 115 Burley Street, Toronto, and took several bichloride of mercury tablets. She was rushed in the ambulance to the hospital for sick children in a critical condition, and it was reported late in the evening that there was no improvement in her condition.

Good Yield

Two fields of wheat on the farm of R. M. Johnson, about 30 miles due west from Regina, on the main line of the C.P.R. were threshed last week. The yield on one field ran twenty-seven bushels to the acre, and on the other over 30 bushels. The wheat looks as if it would grade No. 1 according to Mr. Johnson. It was apparently not injured by the period of wet weather which visited the province in the early part of the month.

Protests Residence Clause

At a mass meeting at Melville, Saskatchewan, a few days ago, a resolution was passed denouncing the regulation requiring voters to reside in a constituency for two months prior to the date of proclamation of the prohibiting referendum. A wire was sent to Ottawa to this effect.

Kaiser Dislikes Publicity

The former Emperor of Germany has decided to fence himself off completely from his neighbors. At a few places about his house, where persons walking on the grounds could be seen from the road, the former emperor has ordered the erection of high fences. The work is being carried out.

Fire Caused By Thresher

A spark from the threshing engine on the farm of Thomas Dunbar, North Portal, ignited the straw stack and the flames spread to the cattle barn which was completely destroyed. Flying particles of burning straw or boards ignited the school barn of Britannia S. D., a quarter of a mile away and it also was destroyed, together with four driving horses of neighboring farmers. Thomas Dunbar's large barn also had a narrow escape.

"Hard Times" for Alberta

Indications point to the fact that many returned veterans in the larger centres of Alberta will suffer from unemployment during the coming winter. The openings offered a year ago by the vocational training schools will no longer be available, while it is not considered likely that any government financial aid will be forthcoming. The local branch of the G.W.V.A. are making plans to meet the situation.

Killed in Freight Yards

Nick Pezenecoff, Crescent Valley, a Doukhobour laborer, 50 years of age, employed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, was instantly killed at Nelson, B.C., recently, when he stepped in front of a car being spotted for ice loading in the freight yards by a Canadian Pacific railway yard engine.

Orchestra of Forty-five in Family

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Heathcote of Waltham Cross, England, have a family so large it has an orchestra of forty-five pieces within its own circle. The family includes five sons, four daughters, thirty-three grandchildren and five great grandchildren. They play forty-five instruments between them; seven grand-daughters play the organ, piano and violin and two great grandchildren the organ.

Canadians Stranded Abroad

Builder state that the estimate that only 500 ex-soldiers are stranded in England is optimistic. According to personal observation there are more than that number in London alone, exclusive of hundred who are temporarily employed. Captain Pickett's of the department of repatriation in Ottawa dealing with the unemployed states that information received from the agents of the department in London indicates that there are at present 1,000 Canadians stranded in the British capital. Many of these are without funds and are in a destitute condition. Others are employed but are unable to secure sufficient money to pay their passage home. Many of the men have been in England since the armistice was signed, and have been unable to secure employment. Others have been in hospital and on discharge have found themselves penniless. Many have written to the department asking for assistance to return to Canada.

Big Demand for Alberta Coal

There is reported to be a big demand for Alberta coal at Winnipeg which points to the fact that the favorable impression it first created is being well maintained. Large shipments during the past few months have gone forward. What the total will amount to is not exactly known at present, but in some quarters it is estimated that 80 per cent. of all the coal burned in Winnipeg this winter will have come from Alberta. Considerable shipments of Alberta coal are also sent to various points in Saskatchewan.

Home in Paris for Canadians

Philippe Roy, commissioner general for Canada in France, is in Montreal engaged in the task of organizing a permanent committee for this province to further the scheme for the foundation of a home for Canadian students in Paris. In an interview he stated that the scheme was making great headway and it was already assured of success. The provinces of Quebec and Ontario have each made arrangements for five scholarships. The total amount required was $500,000 and it is now proposed to form a permanent committee in each province to raise the necessary funds to build the home.

Veterans Insane as Result of War

It is reported that 1,000 Canadians who fought at the front are insane; 1,500 have tuberculosis and 103 have incurable diseases. Thirty-five hundred others are being treated in the military hospitals. The S.C.R. department, however, is steadily closing up these institutions and concentrating the patients in the larger hospitals. The training centres are also being closed up. This fall the department, as such, will likely shut down.

Employment of returned soldiers is now on civilian rather than military basis, though preference will be given to men who are recovering from disability.

Pickford Tells Story of Night Wife Died

Jack Pickford, husband of Olive Thomas, the movie star, who died recently in a Paris hotel from mercurial poisoning, has issued the following statement:

"I went to London to buy some clothes for myself and arrived back in Paris that Saturday night. We had dinner with a few friends, and went to the cafes. We arrived at the Ritz about three o'clock in the morning, after I had booked airplane seats for London. We intended to go Sunday morning. Both of us were tired out and had been drinking a little. I insisted that we had better get up early and pack, and went to bed immediately. She fussed around and wrote a note to her mother as follows: "Mamma dear: Well, and having a nice time. Leaving here September 11. I will cable you from the boat and tell you all the news when I arrive. Love to all. (Signed) Dollie.

White Man Killed by Blacks

A thousand people besieged St. Gabriel's church in Chicago for more than an hour a few nights ago. Three negroes who were reported to have killed a white man had taken refuge in this church and Chief of Police Garrety ordered the entire police mobilized. Shortly after the white man, Barrett, had been killed, three negroes were dragged from a street car close to the killing and beaten. Only when police arrived with rifles did the mob capitulate.

Farmer Killed

Metro Burchaili, a farmer of Waskaw, Sask., was killed last week when run over by a binder, being badly mutilated by the knives of the machine. He had been talking to his father a few minutes before. He was removing the halters from the horses when they became frightened and ran him down, pulling the binder over him. The victim leaves a wife and six children. A brother was accidentally killed last May.

Imprisoned in Cellar

A short time ago the police made the discovery that in a dark cellar Marie Koluszki, a crippled girl, aged nineteen, has been kept hidden in a cellar for seventeen years. Officials learned that she had been placed there when she was two years old and she had the physical appearance of a child of six: her limbs were twisted and shrivelled and her face gaunt and discolored.

Protests Against Rent Profiteering

Winnipeg tenants are numerous in placing complaints against rent profiteering. One of the complaints is signed by eighteen tenants in the same apartment house and states that increases going into effect vary from 35 to 50 per cent. Investigation into each individual complaint will commence shortly.

President of Montreal Club

The Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, prime minister of Canada, has been elected president of the Club Canadien, an exclusive French-Canadian social club of Montreal.

One Hundred and Ten Years Old

Harry Kwoomet, an Indian, died recently in the Tsartlip reserve near Victoria, B.C., aged one hundred and ten years.

Resume Publication

After three weeks' suspension, the Liverpool and Manchester papers are again publishing, the printers' dispute having been settled.

The Lesser Evil

He was one of those fellows who thought he could do anything, an opinion shared by some of his friends.

I can't decide whether to go in for painting or poetry," he remarked one evening to the young lady he bored with his vain chatter.

"I'd go in for painting if I were you," replied the girl.

"Then you've seen some of my paintings?"

"Oh, no!" she told him cruelly. "But I've heard some of your poetry!"

TOWN OF REDCLIFF.

REVISION OF VOTERS' LIST.

The Voters' List of the Town of Redcliff is now completed, and may be inspected at the office of the Secretary-Treasurer between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., except Saturday, and on that day between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

Any person having the necessary qualification and whose name has been omitted from the List, is requested to immediately make application to this office, in order that his or her name may be added.

F. H. COURTNELL,
Secretary-Treasurer.
September 3rd, 1920.

What Lloyd George Thinks of Life Insurance

"The willingness to take risks is, in the great merchant or capitalist, a virtue. It is to him what courage is to a soldier, or imagination to a poet. But the willingness to take risks is in the wage earner or the salary earner, a weakness, yes, even a vice. The contrary of the vice of gambling is the virtue of thrift, and the system of life insurance has given the thrifty man his opportunity."
